EDITOR'S INTRODUCTION

The late Mr. R. Tirumalai, IAS, was not only an able administrator, who held the high rank of Secretary to the Government of India, but also a distinguished scholar in historical and epigraphical studies. He was a student of the revered doyen of South Indian history, the late Prof. K.A. Nilakanta Sastri. He retained his interest in ancient history and epigraphy even after joining the IAS and untiringly devoted himself to research in these fields throughout his administrative career and after retirement. This book bears the stamp of his keen intellect, his meticulous scholarship and his first-hand knowledge of the ancient as well as modern systems of administration. His book is a welcome addition to the studies in South Indian history which are few and far between.

The Department of Archaeology of the Government of Tamilnadu has already published three of his historical works: 1.Rajendra Vinnagar (1980) 2.Studies in Ancient Townships of Pudukkottai(1981) 3.Collect ed papers(1994). The present work titled 'The Pandyan Townships' is the fourth and the last book written by Mr.Tirumalai shortly before his death in 1997. The book is published in two parts - Part I dealing with the ancient geography of the Pandyan townships and Part II dealing with life in these townships in all their multi-faceted aspects. This tremendous work of scholarship, which is the outcome of a lifetime of research on Pandyan inscriptions, will be a boon to scholars interested in the social and economic history of the Pandyan period.

My predecessor, Thiru Natana.Kasinathan, deserves appreciation for taking the initiative to publish this work, and it is my good fortune to see his efforts bear fruit during my time. I am especially grateful to Tmt..R.Vasanthakalyani, Epigraphist and Tmt.B.Valarmathi, P.C. to Commissioner for their unstinted cooperation and assistance in editing this Volume.

K. Ashok Vardhan Shetty, IAS,
Commissioner of Archaeology.

PREFACE

The Pandyan Townships Part I and II are the outcome of my intense research based on the Pandyan Epigraphs, most of which remain unpublished as yet. This was greatly facilitated by the Jawaharlal Nehru Fellowship granted to me for two years 1983-85 by the Jawaharlal Nehru Trust. I am deeply sensible of the honour conferred on me which has enabled me to intensively research into the vast unpublished material; and bring out this pioneer work on the Pandyan Townships.

I thank the Jawaharlal Nehru Trust for this generous funding of the Project. The collection of materials alone has taken over two years. I had also to tap other sources, the Tamil Nadu Department of Archaeology and the secondary sources. The total output as a result was too much to be compressed into one volume. I have, therefore, published the histories of some individual Pandyan Townships in my "Collected Papers". Part-I of this work contains the historical geography of the Pandyan Townships. The substantive content of life in the Pandyan Townships in all their multi-faceted aspects is dealt with in Part-II. The Introduction Chapter sets out the scope and content of Part-II. It is appropriate that the three works are being published by the State Department of Archaeology.

It is my privilege to acknowledge the great interest evinced by the Chief Minister of Tamil Nadu, Dr.MKarunanidhi and the Minister for Tamil Development, Dr.M.Tamizhkudimagan in publishing this work. I have had the privilege of working with both of them and it is indeed an act of their personal kindness and attachment to me that they encourage me in publishing these two volumes of original work. It also evidences the interest they have in bringing out new aspects of Tamil Culture and original research in the history of Tamil Nadu.

I am grateful to Thiru. V.Palanichamy, Secretary, Tamil Development and Culture and Thiru. Natana Kasinathan, Director of Archaeology in expediting the printing and publication. I also thank the Government of Tamil Nadu for the munificent grant for getting this work in two parts printed in the Government Press, Chennai. My thanks are also due to the Government Press for the neat execution of this work.

I had made a series of visits to Mysore to collect copies and transcripts of the Pandyan inscriptions. The then Director of Epigraphy Dr.K.V.Ramesh evinced a great deal of interest in my work and extending help to me with all the transcripts from the Pandyan Kingdom being collections over a century by the department. The Chief Epigraphist Dr.Madhav N.Katti and the other officers of the Department also were generous in helping me at all times. My colleagues in Karnataka Government made my stay at Mysore very comfortable and afforded me all assistance through the Administrative Training Institute and its Director. To them all, my thanks are due.

I have made this topographical study comprehensive. But a mere listing of place names and their locations can be meaningful only if it is accompanied by maps. The Survey Department of Tamil Nadu Government helped me in preparing the original maps under my direction and guidance. They have been approved for unrestricted publication by the Ministry of Defence and by the Surveyor General of India, Dehradun. My sincere thanks are due to the Joint Secretary Sri A.K.Jain of the Ministry of Defence and to Major General L.M.Deothra, Additional Surveyor General of India, Dehradun. But for the painstaking efforts of the Survey Department of Tamil Nadu Government and its officers, the maps could not have been accomplished. I am greatly indebted to the Commissioners and Director of Survey - Thiru. Meikanda Devan, I.A.S, Thiru. K.Sampathkumar, I.A.S, and the Additional and the Assistant Directors and Sri. Ramachandran, Senior Draughtsman and his assistants in helping me in not only preparing the original maps but also in printing them in the photo offset press of the Survey Department for being attached to this Part.

I have pleasure in acknowledging the secretarial assistance rendered to me in bringing out this volume by my personal staff Thiru. R.Krishnakumar and Thiru. R.Balasubramanian, Dr.A.Rangan and Miss. Sruthi Rangan also helped me. My thanks are due to them. My wife took a great deal of interest and took on herself arranging the chapters and getting the manuscript ready for printing.

It is hoped that scholars will find this original work useful and it will stimulate further studies.

I have pleasure in acknowledging the generous funding for the study granted to me by the Jawaharlal Nehru Trust and the honour conferred on me as a Jawaharlal Nehru Fellow. I am proud to associate this work with the name of the Great National Leader himself a historian who wrote and made history.

This work is hence dedicated to the memory of the late Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru.

The publishing of this work was one of the last wishes of my late husband, who passed away on 8th September 1997 after fulfilling his desire to write Part I and Part II of "PANDYAN TOWNSHIPS". I thank the State Department of Archaeology, Government of Tamil Nadu for bringing out this volume.

THE PANDYAN TOWNSHIPS

Part I

HISTORICAL GEOGRAPHY OF THE PANDYAN KINGDOM

The Pandyan Townships

Introduction:

This work incorporates the results of the original research on the Pāṇḍyan Townships which I have carried out over a period of 7 years. This work has been greatly facilitated by the grant in the form of Fellowship from the Jawaharlal Nehru Memorial Fund for a period of 2 years from 1983-85.

The work mainly depends upon the Pāṇḍyan Inscriptions. The published inscriptions are but few, compared to the total volume available. Hence the 2 years were mainly taken up by the study, copying and analysis of a large volume of unpublished inscriptions available with the Epigraphy wing of the Central Department of Archaeology. My greatful appreciation is due to the then Director of Epigraphy Dr.K.V.Ramesh and the Chief Epigraphist to the Government of India Shri Katti for making available this large corpus of unpublished inscriptions in their custody.

While studying the unpublished inscriptions, it came to light that there were a number of inscriptions originally copied by the Department of Archaeology but the estampages for which have become worn out due to efflux of time. Some new inscriptions also have to be copied and some of the earlier ones denovo. The Director of Epigraphy kindly undertook to fill this lacunae and has since furnished me with the copies of most of these inscriptions required. My work would not have been complete but for this prompt and effective assistance of the Directorate and my personal gratitude to the Director of Epigraphy has become many fold.

The copper plates of the period form another good branch of the evidence and these have also been harnessed.

I have utilised the evidence that can be culled from literary sources, but in its very nature this is but comparative or corroborative in nature and meagre in quantum.

Hence the work is essentially an interpretative analysis of the data found in the inscriptions. This analysis is for a large part original but acknowledgedly utilises the results of investigations by pioneers and savants like Hulzch, Venkiah, K.VSubramanya Iyer, T.N.Subramanian and above all, Prof.K.A.Nilakanta Sastri.

The attempt is “to go to the fountain and drink,” closely following the texts and piecing up the usages from several epigraphs and in relation to the context in which they occur. It is hoped that this methodology has helped in improving our knowledge of the diction and terminology of the times and brings out the true import of the texts.

Scope of the work:

This work aims at reconstructing the social and economic conditions in the Pāṇḍyan Townships not merely in their contours, but analysing all the implications of the data that can be marshalled from the inscriptions.

While indexing the inscriptions, it struck me that a totally new aspect of work is well worth attempting. The available data lent itself easily for locating the places important and not so important, the Nādus in which they were located and where the division was a Vaḷanādu, such Vaḷanādus could also be identified. The more dense the date, the territorial boundaries of the Nādu could also be delineated. But the published inscriptions had left a lot of gaps. As a rule, identification was easy and definite if the place name occurs in an inscription in its place of occurrence. Hence, at my request the Director of Epigraphy was kind enough to furnish me with fresh inscriptions copied in the later years and these were of great avail. The result of this work is reflected in the reconstructed Historical Geography of the Pāṇḍyan Kingdom. This work itself has become sufficiently elaborate, fit enough to be published as the first part of the work.

Arrangement of the Chapters

The whole work is published in 2 parts. Part I consists of the Historical Geography of the Pāṇḍyan Kingdom. The general features of this reconstruction are set out in the introductory chapter of that part. The detailed territorial divisions and the principal places of interest therein as revealed in the inscriptions are set out in the pages that follow. The territorial divisions are marked out in the 3 maps included. Contiguity of the Nāḍus has been maintained as far as the evidence would permit. The changes in the formation of the nāḍus or Valanāḍus and the changes in the territorial ambit in which particular places were situated have also been noticed. They are only a few.

Place names and territorial divisions have been named and renamed in the context of Cōla occupation of the Pāṇḍyan kingdom. These have been noticed and the restoration of the names agreeably to the Pāṇḍyas after they reasserted their authority has also been brought out.

This part of the work provides a secure geographical basis to identify places and to approximately ascertain the spread of the nāḍus. Besides, it provides a basis on which the nativity of several officers of the kingdom could be ascertained. These could blaze the trail for further lines of research indicated by me.

Part II reconstructs the social and economic conditions not in any general way but in the particular context of the data thrown up. The first chapter deals with the conditions upto the tenth century, during the period the "Pāṇḍyas of the First empire", as Prof.Sastri has approximately termed it. The second chapter onwards deal with conditions during the period of the Cōlas from the end of the 10th century to the beginning of the 13th. The Pāṇḍyan supremacy was reasserted by about the later date. Significant changes in tenures and the modes of levy of land dues had occurred. The economic stress felt in particular tracts and the land colonisation noticed in the kingdom has been described. Particular attention has been paid to the role of the community in the creation and maintenance of public utilities like irrigation tanks or drinking water sources or construction of dwelling places etc

So then, the book aims at presenting the community life and organisation spread over 5 countries as realistically as possible, based on authentic data that can be extracted from the epigraphs. New aspects of life like the food and dietary habits, the condition and yield of milch cattles and animals and several other aspects not hitherto brought out have been now incorporated in this research work perhaps for the first time.

I wish to express my gratefulness to the Jawaharlal Nehru Trust which made this work possible. It is a humble but fitting tribute perhaps to a great son of India who not only wrote History but also made it.

My particular thanks are due to Dr.K.V.Ramesh, the Director of Epigraphy and Dr.Katti and his other colleagues for unstintingly supplying me with copies of a large number of unpublished inscriptions.

The University of Madras has invited me to deliver a series of lectures explaining the results of my research which I accepted. The lectures were delivered early in 1993 and the Madras University has graciously accepted to print the work in 2 parts of their publication under their Madras University Archaeological series. I am grateful to the University and the Vice-Chancellor for this recognition of my work. I am particularly grateful to Prof.K.V.Raman, Head of the Department of ancient Indian History who evinced a great deal of interest in the methodologies that I have adopted and my findings. I am also grateful to a host of other friends. The Commissioner of Survey and Settlement Shri Meikanda Devan has rendered invaluable assistance to me in help offered for preparing the maps on the basis of my studies. The officers of the Survey Department also helped me with their expertise. I readily acknowledge this technical work of theirs which has made my work more intelligible and easy of understanding.

I have had the assistance of others like Sri.R.Krishnakumar and R.V.Seshapani and Dr.Rangan who spared their leisure in making copies for the print. Others like Dr.Vagula went through the manuscripts and offered suggestions. To my wife I owe a special debt, as she not only stood by me in my long hours of work but also relieved me of all other responsibilities to concentrate on the work. To almost all others who helped in this work I owe my thanks.

Part - I

THE HISTORICAL GEOGRAPHY OF THE PANDYAN KINGDOM : AN ANALYSIS

A succinct localisation of the political divisions of the Pāndyan kingdom is a felt want. Dr. Subbarayalu's *Political geography of the Chola country*¹ is a good account of the political divisions of the Cōla country during the period AD 800 to 1300. The localisation of places and the territorial divisions into which they fall in the Pāndyan kingdom, is perhaps, attempted for the first time in this work.

This work covers the undivided districts of Tirunelvēli, Rāmanāthapuram and Madurai. The Pāndyan kingdom and the Nādus therein extended to the Pudukkōṭṭai District including Arantāṅgi Taluk. These have also been included by Dr. Subbarayalu in his analysis.² Dr. K. V. Subramania Iyer³ has also intensively studied and located Milalai Kūrram mostly in Arantāṅgi and Tirumeyyam taluks and Muttūrru kūrram which lies in Tiruvādānai taluk and extends into Arantāṅgi taluk. Hence these tracts are not covered by this study.

The title "historical geography" has been used to convey two segments of the subject.

- (a) the political geography of the tract, its divisions and
- (b) the changes they had undergone in the course of six centuries from the 9th to the 15th century.

Objectives of the study

The objectives of this study are as follows :

(I) First to identify and locate places as far as possible from the epigraphic evidence. It is reasonable to surmise that the larger the number of inscriptions noticed from a place or the more persistent the name of a place occurs, the more prominent they should have been in the period to which the inscriptions belong. The very intensity and persistence or repetition of the place names are indices of their importance.

(ii) From the location of these places and the particulars of the territorial divisions given, an idea can be had of the spread of those territorial divisions.

(iii) There were a variety of territorial divisions in vogue—Valanādus, Kūrram, Muttam; sometimes the places grouped together were comprised in the command area of the source of irrigation, feeding the area, either a tank, or a river or a stream. An attempt is made to locate such smaller territorial divisions in vogue, and to the extent possible their spread where the evidence is adequate the location of the surrounding or bordering divisions are also given. This is particularly feasible in respect of the divisions in Tirunelvēli district. But in Rāmanāthapuram and Madurai districts excepting the Vaigai river ribbon, the rest of the areas do not disclose such continuous intensity of evidence at present; hence it is not feasible to demarcate the adjoining territorial divisions.

Finally, the evolution of these Nādus, the change, additions or enlargement of the divisions during the study period, and also the changes in the names of the territorial divisions with the rise and fall of the ruling dynasties are also traced as far as the available evidence will permit. But it may be observed even at the threshold, that there was a remarkable continuity and persistence in the territorial divisions and nomenclature. Even if larger divisions were formed by clubbing the Nādus still the latter by and large continued as entities and referred to as such right upto the Vijayanagar times, and even later. Tirunelvēli is referred to as lying in Kīla Vēmbunādu in a copper plate of AD 1732 of the last of the Nāyaks - Vijayaraṅga Cokkanāthanāyaka.⁴ Even in an inscription of AD 1800 Siṅgampuṇari in Tiruppattūr taluk is referred to as Vīrapāṇḍya nallūr in Kēralasiṅga vaḷanādu, a division formed about the 11th century.⁵

SOURCES

This work is based mainly on inscriptions, both published and unpublished in the collection of the Director of Epigraphy, Archaeological Survey of India. The collections are spread over a century. It is quite possible that fresh inscriptions, if gathered, may yield additional data. Hence this work should be considered as a status of our present knowledge of the subject. Literary evidence is also utilised where available. The most valuable aids are the Survey of India Topo maps, and district, taluk and village maps of the State Survey department. 'The Alphabetical list of villages' in the districts also helps a great deal to identify and locate and map the places.

The author in the course of his intensive field inspections for over ten years in the Revenue Settlement Operations had also gathered personal knowledge of the location of the villages in all the districts.

The spread of the inscriptions noticed in the Annual Reports of Epigraphy is uneven. Tirunelvēli district has contributed the largest number to the collection. Next only to that is the number of inscriptions noticed from Rāmanāthapuram district. Madurai district has comparatively lesser number, and even these are concentrated on the Vaigai ribbon, Cumbum Valley, and Mēlur Taluk and in and around Palani. A large area in Palani, Diṇḍugal, Periyakulam, Kodaikānal and even Tirumaṅgalam Taluks do not yield much data, as at present.

The available data yield two main lines of evidence - inscriptions found in sites or in places adjacent to the locations referred to. These provide a clinching basis. Certainty of location can be predicated and many of the places even retain their names intact and in some cases in a corrupted form. But then, villages of the same name occur in different geographical divisions. They will have to be distinguished. Examples of the same name continuing to the present day are Vindanūr (Kurumarai nādu) Tolaivilimaṅgalam (in Tiruvaludi nādu) Malli in Malli nādu, Tiruppāccōrri (in Rajagambhīra vaļanādu) Śīrukāṇappēr in Tirukkānappēr Kūrram Neṭtūr (in Karuṇgudi nādu). Corrupted names easily reveal their original identity, Sērmādēvi-Cēranmādēvi Cm, Rādhāpuram - Rājarājapuram, Mārandai-Mārandāyanallūr, Kalijeyamaṅgalam-Kariśūlndamaṅgalam, Tiruppattūr-Tirupputtūr, Kaṇdrāppūr-Kaṇḍaramāṇikkam. There are two Karuṇgūlams in Nāngunēri taluk itself. Such instances can be multiplied in Sivagaṅgai taluk and in almost any taluk. Māvilaṅgai is a village in Mudukulattūr taluk but the other one referred to in the inscription of Mudukulattūr taluk lies on its border in Paramakkudi taluk. There is a third one in Tiruvādānai taluk. One has to ascertain the location with reference to the nādu, and the name of the deity or other relevant evidence.

Even the adjacent Nādu bear the same name though the larger geographical divisions are different-Mullinādu (western part of Ambāsamudram taluk) lay in Mudikondacōla vaļanādu. The eastern part of Ambāsamudram taluk was also called Mullinādu but it was in Uttamacōla vaļanādu in Cōla Pāṇḍya times.

The second line of evidence can be discerned in the places of nativity of officials who authenticate the grant orders of the king. These are found in inscriptions all over the tract. True, the Mandalam, Vaļanādu, Nādu, Kūrram and sometimes the tank which irrigates the lands are all given. The significance of this line of evidence is in its throwing up further aspects for investigation which are outlined at the end of this chapter.

Literature and Lexicographical works yield but little information. The term Nādu and Nagara occur the Nādu among the place terms in the Nigaṇḍus or Book of synonyms. But far from giving a definitive denotation, they tend to give but the general import, made the more vague by clubbing other synonyms. The denotation of the term, which the inscriptions yield is lost in the literary works. The available evidence in typical works on this aspect is examined below.

“Sēndan Divākaram” which is perhaps the oldest extant Tamil lexicon (Nigaṇḍu) gives the synonyms for the Nādu-Paidiram, Mandi(a)lam, Paudil (Pādi) Dēyam, Tannadai, Sānapadai (jānapada) Akaśil Summai, Kandam Ēni, Ulagu. Nādu also occurs as a general name for the world.⁶

Two verses printed in the Saiva Siddhānta edition of ‘Divākaram’ are not authentic. They are :

- (i) definition of grāma is a village surrounded by abiding water resources and fields.
- (ii) A large village is one where there are more than 500 residents.

These are not found in the palm leaf manuscript. The word “grama” itself finds no mention in ‘Divākaram’ manuscripts. As prof. Vaiyapuri pointed out, modern editors in a well intentioned but misdirected effort to fill in the “omissions” they had noticed had added verses not found in the original.

Nagara has two synonyms Pādi, *Puram*⁷

Pingalam, a medieval Tamil lexicon again repeats Nādu among the synonyms for the world⁸. The other synonyms of the Nādu in the Divākaram are repeated with the additions, Pādi, Nīvaram, Kōttam and Rācciyam (Rajya).

6. Chap. V - Vs 13 & 15 p 100 of Sēndan Divākaram (Saiva Siddhānta publication 1958). In the critical edition of the work from palm leaf manuscript prepared by Vidwān Mu. Shanmugam* Pillai, under publication by the Madras University, this is repeated verses 10 & 11. I am grateful to him for sparing his valuable manuscript copy.

Verse 10 of the Ms gives “Puvanam (Bhuvanam) nādu, polil, talam (sthalam) Pudavi, Pavaram, Ulagin poduppeyar pala”

7. Ibid Ms verse 72

8. Piṅgalā Nigaṇḍu-Saiva Siddhānta Kalaga publication 1978. V 458 - p 87.

*Pillai (A long associate of Prof. S. Vaiyapuri)

It also gives the synonyms of Sirrūr, Pēdu, Kudi, Tannadai, Patṭu, Nocci, Palli.⁹

The commentator of Puranānūru though of a later date, interprets Purām verse 24 in which Milalai and Muttūrru Kūrram, (the former located in Arantāngi, Tirumeyyam taluks and the latter in Arantāngi and Tiruvādānai taluks).¹⁰ This usage confirms Nādu and Kūrram are more or less synonymous. Dr. Subbarayalu's interpretation on the same lines is attested by the evidence.¹¹

In the Divyaprabandam the term Nādu and Nagara occur in Tiruppallāndu¹² of Periyālvār. But the traditional theological interpretation does not bring out any distinct denotation of each. Nādu understandably, is a wider area, and the Nagara a particular or 'specific' township. The former is generic in character and the latter of a particular or distinct character.

The 16th Century 'Cūḍamani Nigandu'¹³ adds the following among the synonyms of the Nādu, 'Polil', 'Aluvam'. It further defines śirugrāmams a place with 100 habitats and Peruṅgrāmam as a place of 500 habitats (Kudis). Incidentally, this description of a hamlet and a township would indicate the conceptual low density of population. A coastal town with commercial activity is "Pattinam".¹⁴

The later "Nāmadīpikai Nigandu" repeats the distinction between Sirrūr and Pērūr.¹⁵ It adds "Varudam" 'Simai'. (Simai which has become current in Vijayanagar times) among the synonyms of Nādu.

The Agarādi Nigandu¹⁶ (Circa AD 1594) also refers to Sirrūr as located in Kurinji nilam, the tract abounding in hills.

From the review of the Nigandu and the few literary usages the term Nādu far from being defined is only treated as a synonym for world and divisions like 'Rājya' or 'Simai'. The repetitive occurrence of the traditional synonyms in successive Nigandus though occasionally adding later or contemporary usages, ignores the specific territorial divisions, the nomenclature denoting specific formations and the changes their names underwent which the terms conveyed in the inscriptions from the 8th to 17th century.

This last aspect is well brought out by the historical geography as reconstructed in the following pages. What is most striking from this topographical analysis is that there is a remarkable continuity and persistence in the nomenclature of the Nāḍus, Kūrram and Muttam etc. right from the time of the Pāṇḍyas of the First Empire (9th century AD), right up to Vijayanagar times and after. This helps when evidence is in parenthesis. We could project backward sometimes with the slender or only piece of evidence available. ‘‘Pāṇḍavamāṅgalam’’ is a Brahmadeya (in Kōvilpaṭṭi taluk) in Venbaikudi nādu. This is known from the Pāṇḍavarmaṅgalam Plates of Jat. Sundara Cōla Pāṇḍya. It was named Pañcavannādēvi Cm. A scholar Kaṭavūr Āriyan Tirukkōṭti Namibi, well versed in Sanskrit and Tamil had two centuries later (AD 1277) hailed from that place who is credited with translating many Sāstras from Sanskrit Texts into Tamil.¹⁷ The latter name of the grant village had lingered for over three centuries while even today Pāṇḍavarmaṅgalam survives as the name of the place.

The long held consistency has helped in compiling the historical geography for about six centuries - from the 9th to the 15th - and the results are exhibited in the pages that follow. Where several inscriptions are from the same place only typical instances are cited, but when there is a change in the Vaḷanāḍu or the Nāḍu or in the name of the village the variations are noticed. Topographical maps indicating the places and the location of the Nāḍus are also appended. Admittedly the map reflects the density of the evidence now available. The riverine tracts are richer in the data. The dry belts have less and there are large gaps left in the maps due to lack of data.

The earliest available stratum of evidence itself discloses a long established territorial division of the kingdom. The Kalugumalai label inscriptions on Jaina images¹⁸ and those at Uttamapālāyam¹⁹ refer to the nāḍus from which the donors had hailed. The evidence from the Tiruccendūr inscriptions of Varaguṇa Mahārāja²⁰ is clinching. The territorial divisions and the townships (with their character) among which the endowment by the king was distributed for contributing the articles required for the services in the temple out of the interest proceeds are tabulated below :

This 9th century epigraph can lend itself to the following inferences. First, even in the 9th century in the Pāṇḍyan Kingdom Vaḷanādu, as a territorial division, was already in vogue. It was in use alongside Nādu and Kūrram. Though the territorial extent comprised in it might have been much smaller than the term denoted in the Cōla times, the Cōlas had picked up the term ‘Vaḷanādu’ and applied it to a larger territorial division. Was this the need that resulted from a larger imperial domain that had been raised from the time of Parāntaka-I and met in the time of Rājarāja I?

The formation of the Nādu was already well established. It does not appear to have been the result of a royal fiat or decree, though some territorial units had resulted from the creation by the royal grants, as noticed below. They could have come into existence with the natural spread of cultivation and settlements, thus reflecting kinships or inter-related social formations.

The Nāḍus had constituent units which were varied in character. The Tiruccendūr inscription itself refers to these types among whom the King's donation in cash was distributed. The Sabhās (of Brahmadēya villages) were the largest. Next were the Urs. There was only one Nagara among them.

There were three terms often in use to denote the cluster or group of villages - muṭṭam (Kīl Irāṇiya muṭṭam in which Alagarkōil was located); Kūrram (Pāganūr Kūrram in which Sōlavandān was located). Others are Tuvvūr Kūrram (Paramakudi Taluk) Mākoluvūrkūrram (Tirupattūr) Tālaiyūr Kūrram (Tiruvādānai Taluk) Tirukkānappēr Kūrram (Sivagaṅga Taluk) Muttūru Kūrram (Tiruvādānai Taluk). Muṭṭam seems to refer, among others a village or township²¹ or it may mean side or slope²² of the hills or mountains which formed a natural boundary or delimitation. It is used even today to refer to the land abutting the sea (as Kumari muṭṭam).

It should be noted that when larger divisions of Vaḷanāḍus were formed, the smaller divisions within continued to be in vogue.

Townships were grouped also under the tanks irrigating the command areas therein. This is particularly noticed in the Vaigai belt of Madurai, and Rāmanāthapuram districts. Madurai itself is always denoted as Mādakkulakkīl, Māraṇūr, Śirukalattūr, Vellūrkuricci, and Vellūr under Alagiya Pāndyakulam; Rājendram and Tiruppūvanam under Rājasīṅgakkulam.²³

Similarly the rivers or streams by which the command areas in villages were fed, and the upper or lower reach thereof served in addition to distinguish and locate the townships. Tenkarai nāḍu south of Tāmbraparaṇi (in Nāgunēri taluk) Paccayārrupōkku, villages fed by Paccayāru or Nāttāru pōkku (Vijayanārāyaṇam) are examples from Tirunelvēli District. Rāmanāthapuram also had several command areas. Tiruppattūr on (West Kūndār) Mīkundāru, Sūraikkudi on Tēnārrupōkku, Nāttarruppōkku in Sivagaṅgi Taluk, are other examples. But together with such distinctive commands the nāḍus or Kūrram or Muṭṭam also are given. Sometimes when the larger territorial unit like Madurāntaka vaḷanāḍu (in Cōla times) or Kēralasinga vaḷanāḍu is given, these specified command areas under the tanks or rivers serve to help locate the villages referred to, particularly when the villages of the same name sometimes occur else where.

22. Ibid - Also Perungadai - Dr. U.V.S. Edn. 1958, p. 693.

23. EI XXV p 89.

The following classification of the names of the Nādus can be struck.

Name of District	After a place within	Geographical location	After the ruler	Others
Tirunelvēli	7	5	4	13
Rāmanāthapuram	24	4	5	14
Madurai	5	5	1	10

It is however noticed that the Nādus were not delimited by any geographical or natural boundaries. Tenvāri nādu had villages on either side of Chittāru. Tiruvaludi nādu had villages on either side of the river Tambraparani. So also Tenkallaga nādu had within it townships on either side of the river Vaigai. Even the limits of villages had spread on either side of the river (like Kōil Kuruvitturai). Such examples can be multiplied on the course of the river Vaigai. But some nādus falling on the rear side of the hills like Purāmalai nādu or Tirumalai nādu in and around Pirānmalai, Kīl and Mēl Iraṇiya muṭtam on the eastern and south-western side of Alagarkōil hills appear to follow the geographical delineation.

The size of the Nādus, too, was never uniform. The available evidence tends to show the density of the nādus was more in the river fed irrigated tracts like Ambāsamudram, Tenkāsi Taluks and much more in Srivaikuntam, and northern part of Tiruccendūr taluks. Similar examples can be had in the Vaigai belt and in Tiruppattūr taluk. But one should not hasten to conclude the dry uplands had no occupation or settlements. The Nercurā nādu (in Kōvilpaṭṭi taluk) and the Nādus in Sāttūr taluk, on the rising lands across the Vaippāru will dispel such an impression. The location of early grant villages also confirm this fact. The Dalavāipuram plates refer to a land lying close to Nercurā and Aśinādu (Kōvilpaṭṭi taluk).²⁴ The Śrīvaraṁgalam plates refer to the village Vēlaṅgulam in Tenkalavalī nādu (Sivagaṅgai Taluk).²⁵ The Sivakāsi plates refer to a grant in Mēlavēmbu nādu²⁶ i.e. to the western part of Tirunelvēli Taluk. Kōvilpaṭṭi a dry red upland area had an inscription of Mārañjādaiyan indicating its early settlement.²⁷ The epigraphic evidence examined also confirm the location of occupied townships in Mudukulattūr, Aruppukkōṭṭai taluks, and in the arid tracts of Śāṅkarankōil or Diṇḍugal taluks. While therefore settlements were not confined to the riverine tracts the density of population should have been comparatively less in the townships formed in early times in the uplands. This view is strengthened by the historical fact that the dry uplands were very largely occupied during Vijayanagar and Nāyak times. Dry cultivation of cotton, pulses, Chillies and Corriander picked up in that period, harnessing tanks and water harvesting of the rains. Diṇḍugal taluk, in Madurai and Kōvilpaṭṭi taluk in Tirunelvēli district can be cited as proof. It should be noted, however, assiduous efforts to construct anicuts across streams and lead the water into tanks or build tanks in rain fed tracts for water harvesting were even practised even in early times. Chieftains like Iruppaikkudi Kilavan initiated such public works. Works which were incomplete or damaged were completed or renovated by the scions of the family in the next generation. The founding of the Brahmadēyas and the Dēvadāna grants were themselves instruments for extending²⁸ cultivation and bring land to productive use. The spread of cultivation and settlements was a continuous process, extending right upto the present. The pressure of population and growing needs would have rendered the use of even sub-marginal lands to be of increasing marginal utility.

As stated already Vaḷanāḍus were in existence even prior to the Cōla conquest of the Pāṇḍya kingdom. But after that conquest the Cōla times had witnessed quite a few changes. These changes can be ascribed (i)to the reign of Rājarāja I (AD 985-1014) (ii) to the Cōla Pāṇḍyas (AD 1017-1040) and (iii)during the reign of Kulōttunga I (AD 1070-1122). The changes have resulted in, perhaps, aimed at the larger formation of Vaḷanāḍus, comprising therein several Nāḍus.

The reason could be this. The Pāṇḍyan Kingdom was compact. Nāḍus and even Vaḷanāḍus were small (hardly of the size of a Block in present day administrative phraseology). The proximity of the king and his frequent touring (as of Jat. Kulaśekhara, Jat. Śrīvallabha and Māra. Sundara I) had kept them in touch with the Nāḍus and the people.

During the Cōla period with the Cōla Pāṇḍya Viceroy located at Madurai, it was perhaps more necessary or conducive to group the nāḍus into larger territorial divisions. There does not, however, appear to be any special bureaucracy or hierarchy of officers for the Vaḷanāḍus as distinct from officials in the Nāḍus. Also the Nāḍus have continued to exist and the location of village is referable to it with the additionality of Vaḷanāḍus.

The available evidence, somewhat satisfying for Tirunelvēli District and less so for Rāmanāṭhapuram and the least satisfying for Madurai when tabulated and analysed yield the following results.

Others like Kīl kalakkūram, Śrī Vallava valanādu and Kuḍanādu, are located as in 'Rājarāja Pāṇḍi nādu', or Maṇḍalam. Excepting the name given for so wide an area extending from Kōvilpaṭṭi to Ambāsamudram and Nāngunēri, no territorial re-distribution seems to have occurred. "Kīl Kalakkūram" however, is said to be in "Iraṭṭapādi Koṇḍa Cōla valanādu" in a fragment of an inscription of Vīra Rājendra's reign in Sivalappēri.^{30A}

In the Cōla Pāṇḍya times a conspicuous re-organisation had taken place. The available data are tabulated below :

Kallaga nādu	- Saṅkarankōil Taluk
Nercura nādu	- Saṅkarankōil Taluk
Śūraṅgudi nādu	- Kōvilpaṭṭi Taluk

However, the eastern half Ambāsamudram also called Mulli nādu ('East' added by me to distinguish it) is constituted into a separate Vaḷanādu, in Uttama Cōla vaḷanādu. But there is another Uttama Cōla vaḷanādu comprising the following :

Nāṭṭārruppōkku	- Naṅgunēri
Tiruvaludi nādu	- Srivaikuṇṭam
Kuḍa nādu	- Tiruccendūr

Kuḍa nādu in A.D. 1023 is located in a separate Rajēndra Cōla vaḷanādu. But in Māravarman Vikrama Cōla-Pāṇḍya's reign it gets included in Uttama Cōla vaḷanādu. If the two Vaḷanādus of the same name are identical then it traversed from the eastern half of the Ambāsamudram Taluk, southward in Naṅgunēri, and proceeded east to Tiruchendūr and Srivaikuṇṭam taluks. Further evidence to confirm this hypothesis is however needed.

But Cōla names are promptly dropped and the old names were restored with the rise of the Pāṇḍyas. For example, Tiruvaludi vaḷanādu drops its Cōla rechristening as Uttama Cōla vaḷanādu.

In Kulōttunga's time the Mudikōṇḍa Cōla vaḷanādu had included Kīlavēmbu nādu (Tirunelvēli taluk)

Kīlkalakkūram	(Tirunelvēli Tk.)
Parāntaka vaḷanādu	(Srivaikuṇṭam Tk.)
Tiruvaludi vaḷanādu	(Srivaikuṇṭam Tk.)

But Kuḍa nādu continued to be in Uttama Cōla vaḷanādu as it was in the reign of Mār. Vikrama Cōla Pāṇḍya.

In Rāmanāthapuram district after the advent of the Cōlas the following changes are noticeable. It too formed part of Rājarāja Pāṇḍi nādu. The tract to the South and east of Madurai was named as “Madurāntaka Valanādu”. It comprised the following Nādus in the Cōla-pāṇḍya regime :

Āṇmā nādu	- Rājapālaiyam taluk
Iruñjō nādu	- Sāttūr
Pūṅga nādu	- Aruppukkōṭṭai
Vēmbu nādu	- Aruppukkōṭṭai
Mānavīra valanādu	-
Alagiya Pāṇḍya Kuḷakkil	- Sivagaṅgai
Vadatalaicembu	- Mudukulattūr

In the reign of Kulōttunga I, the following nādus are found added to Madurāntaka valanādu.

Malli nādu	- Srivilliputtūr
Karunīlakkudi	- Sāttūr
Sundarapāṇḍya valanādu	- Mudukulattūr

This made for geographical continuity and cohesion.

Rājendra Cōla valanādu

Karuṅguḍi	Paramakkudi - Sivagaṅgai
Tenkalavalī	Sivagaṅgai
Kalavalī	Sivagaṅgai - Tiruppattūr
Mīlalai kūrram	Arantāṅgi Taluk
Kīl, Naduvil	Tirumeyyam Taluk
Vadapāmpārū
Puramalai	Tiruppattūr
Adaļaiyūr
CōlaPāṇḍya valanādu
Mēl Iraṇiya muṭṭam	- Madurai taluk
Vadapāmpārū	is said to be in Gēyavinōdavalanādu in the reign of Kulōttunga I

The reassertion of the authority of the Pāṇḍyas could not tolerate the continuance of the names like Madurāntaṅka vaṭanādu. It was changed as Madurōdaya vaṭanādu, Rājarāja Pāṇḍinādu or Pāṇḍimāṇḍalam becomes merely Pāṇḍimāṇḍalam.

The Rājendra Cōla vaṭanādu was dropped, and a new Nādu, Kēraḷaśinga vaṭanādu comprised the following :

Perumbū	}	Tiruppattūr taluk
Adaḷaiyūr
Tēnārruppōkku
Kalvāyil
Kīlkundāru
Cōlapāṇḍya vaṭanādu

A new nādu Rājagambhīra vaṭanādu was formed by Jat. Kulaśekhara-I on his granting a Brahmadēya, Rājagambhīra Cm, in his 26th year (AD 1216).

This Vaṭanādu had comprised several townships in the former Nādus - Kīranūr, Panaṅgalūr, Tiyandaikuḍi, Mērkudi, and Purappāraṭai.³¹

The Tiruppūvaṇam copper plates which bring out the formation of this new Vaṭanādu is significant. It lists several villages comprised in the above Nādus. The old land grants to the temples (Dēvadānas) and Jains shrines (Pailiccandam) and Kārāṇmai (occupied holdings) were excluded and on the remaining lands the occupancy was extinguished (Munnudaiyārum, Paṭampērum, Vellān Vagaiyum mudalum thavirthu) and the land demand from the occupants and dues therefrom were given up and the whole was reconstructed as one Nādu, one Ur one holding (oru nādum oru īrum, oru puravum ākki). The grant village was large enough to form a separate Vaṭanādu in this case.

The formation of the Vaṭanādu as of the Ūrs or grant villages had aimed at preserving the integrity of the tenure of the lands/villages comprised therein. The same principle can be deduced from a record of AD 1322. Lands comprising Śakaranēri in Taniyāṇai Vīrapāṇḍya Cm, a Brahmadēya in Ārinādu to one mudali of the king from Arukaikunṭathūr who had agreed to pay the (Vāḍakkadāmai) immutable demand to the deity of Vikramapāṇḍiśvara muḍaiya nāyanār in Cōlapuram. Śakaranēri so sold was separated from the tax register of the mother village, Vīrapāṇḍya Cm in Ārinādu and added to the holdings of the deity of Cōlapuram in Ānmānādu.³² Perhaps on the same analogy the lands held by chieftains (Nāḍalvān) like Kaṭavalī, Adalaiyūr were also formed into nādus as Jīvitaparṇu.

31. EI XXV pp 104-106

The evidence from Madurai district is scanty.

In Rājarāja's reign Madurāntaka vaḷanādu had included Tenkallagā nādu (Tirumāngalam taluk). As noticed above, the name of the Vaḷanādu was changed by the Pāṇḍyas into Madurodaya vaḷanādu.

In Cōla Pāndya times, the Rājēndra Cōla vaḷanādu had included

Kīl Irāṇiyamuttam	}	Madurai
Mēl Irāṇiyamuttam		north & south

Other Nādus like Alānādu and Tenkallaga nādu were merely repeated indicating their location in Rājarāja maṇḍalam but no Vaḷanādus are given. The same is the case with the Nādus in Paṭani taluk where the Kongu Cōlas held sway.

Two reasons militate against the marking of the Cōla vaḷanādu divisions in the maps. First the name changes from Rājarāja's time to that of Cōla Pāndya rulers and later in Kulottunga's reign. Secondly they were mostly dropped after the Pāṇḍyas had regained the Kingdom. Hence only the names of Vaḷanādus that were stable are noted in the maps. Moreover the available evidence is inadequate to reproduce the Vaḷanādu and their spread with some certainty.

Undoubtedly some changes are noticed in the location of villages. Kattārimāṅgalam was in Srivallabha vaḷanādu in the 9th century³³ but it figures in Amudaguna vaḷanādu from the 11th century.³⁴ Kūrrilamaṇādu seems to be a later formation separated from Tenvārinādu in the 15th century, Vitarāṇa Vinōda vaḷanādu (near about Tenkāsi) seems to be a similar addition in later Pāṇḍya times. Korkai nādu is noticed to have been separated from Kuḍanādu. The Nādus were generally named after the principal village important enough at the time (e.g. Neṭcuram) but some have taken names after the rulers (Mānavīra, Rājagambīra etc.). Some others are named with reference to the geographical location (Puramalai, Tirumalai, Kīl Irāṇiyamuttam, etc.) But frankly, some are inexplicable as in Uttamapāṭayam Taluk,³⁵ like Alānādu.

35. There are no Salt pans there, and Dr. Subbarayalu's surmise does not fit in, (Ibid p 31). But it might suit the Alārru nādu in Mudukulattūr taluk.

The craze for the change of place names is pronounced. Sometimes the places were named after a principal donor or benefactor who helped in regranting a village endowed but resumed or lapsed. Cōlapuram in Srivilliputtūr Taluk was named after Uttama Cōlapperiyān, one such benefactor.

Place names too got changed with the changes in the fortunes of dynasties but the earlier names were restored when the displaced Pāṇḍyas reasserted themselves. Vēmbattūr was renamed as Uttama Cōla Cm in Kulōttunga I's time.³⁶ In the reign of Jatāvarman Kulaśekhara I it was again renamed as Śrī Kulaśekhara Cm.³⁷

Srivilliputtūr was renamed as Vikrama Cōla Cm³⁸ in the Cōla times but that was dropped after the Pāṇḍyas of the Second Empire rose to power.

Some of the townships were composite. Cōlapuram was both a Brahmadēya and a Nagarā.³⁹ Tirunelvēli had comprised two Brahmadēyas (at different times of grant) Kulaśekhara Cm and Anavaradadāna Cm Śivapuri (Tiruppattūr) had a Brahmadēya and a Nagarā constituents. Tirukōṣṭiyūr was a Dēvadāna-Brahmadēya.

To complete the evolution of the territorial divisions, in the Vijayanagar times a superimposition of the Sīma (tract) (from Sīmā in Telugu - land) or Māgani, Usāvadi came to be added. Tiruppattūr sīmai, Viravanallūr māgani, can be cited as illustrations.⁴⁰

It now remains to examine some of the views expressed by scholars in the light of the evidence gathered. Dr. Subbarayalu has done a good piece of original work relating to the Political Geography of the Cōla country. He has adduced evidence and critically examined original texts and argued his way to conclusions. He also rightly stresses the utility of a compact tract and periodisation as prerequisites for such a study.⁴¹ But his observation that “there is no record expressly referring to regrouping or rearranging of any Nādu would need revision in the light of the evidence marshalled here from the Pāṇḍyan kingdom. But that such instances are far and few between is correct. Such rearrangement could have largely followed the grant of the land or tract cutting across the Nādus.

Dr. Subbarayalu does not subscribe to the view that the nādu had comprised the variety of townships - like the Brahmadēya, the Dēvadāna, the Ur and the Nagarā.

41. Opcit. - T. N. State Dept. of Archaeology - p4.

He seems to rest this on the concept that the term ‘Nāṭṭar’ referred to the Vellānvagai holders of the Vellāla caste, to the exclusion of the Brahmadēya Kīlavar and other occupants.

The term ‘Nādu’ has two denotations. First it was a geographical area, marking a unit of a territorial division. The concept certainly admits of the territorial area of nādu as consisting of the variety of townships of different tenures. The Nagara, the Brahmadēya, the Dēvadāna and the Ūr are all relatable to the Nādu in which it is situated otherwise the ubiquitous adjunct nāttu. ‘Innāttu’, ‘Brahmadēyam’, ‘Nagaram’ has no meaning. The clinching evidence is afforded by the Sivakāśi plates of the Vīra Pāṇḍya. The grant village of 3 vēlis of wet land, the habitat 10 mā, renamed as “Śāsanamaṅgalam” was granted as ‘Ekabhōga Brahmadēya’. It was circumambulated by the elephant and it was sequestered from the urāṇmai (i.e. the village revenue and holdings account) and made into a separate unit and added to the ‘Nāṭṭanmai’.⁴²

(Śāsana maṅgalamena Vērru pērudaiyadāy Ēkabhōga Brahmadēyamāy pidī ūlīvittu ūrāṇmayil vēronrākki nāṭṭanmai yōdudan kūṭṭi)

The term ‘Nādu’ has another significance referring to the collective body of the Nādu, consisting of its occupants the ‘Nāṭṭar’. In this sense, it may refer to the Vellālar or Vellānvagai occupants in some instances specifically cited by Dr. Subbarayalu, as the Mannārgudi inscription of Rājarāja III clearly conveys.

The Nāṭṭar of the adjoining Nādus were invariably pressed into service as Sāmantās while demarcating a grant village. The Daļavāipuram plates use the term ‘Nāṭṭar’ in this sense -Āśināttu Nāṭṭarum Maccuṛuvalam āna Vīrēndra Nercuranāttu nāṭṭarum udanāgi ninrellai kāṭṭa.⁴³

The Nāṭṭars’ function was to implement grants, to demarcate boundaries, fix the stones and plant prickly pear and publicise the grant⁴⁴ and admit the grantees to possession of the land so granted.

The usage of the Nāṭṭar as a general term to refer to the occupants is also noticed. This is illustrated by the Kāñcipuram inscription cited by Prof. Sastri,⁴⁵ and by the use of the term in the Periyālvār’s, stanza cited already and in Tiruvāśagam “Nāṭṭar nagai seyya”.⁴⁶ It is not uncommon that the same term can convey different denotations especially in Tamil and Sanskrit, or any other language for that matter. The explanation afforded above perfectly reconciles the interpretation of the term ‘Nādu’ by Prof. Sastri⁴⁷ and the meaning attributed to the word Nāṭṭār by Dr. Subbarayalu. In other words, the term ‘nāṭṭār’ can be interpreted in terms inclusive of the Vellala occupants in the nādu; the term Nādu cannot apply to the occupied townships of Vellālas alone.

Whether the term “Nāṭṭār” refers in general to the residents or occupants within a nādu or to the vellala or Vellānvagai revenue paying occupants specifically can only be construed with reference to the context in which the term occurs.

It is indeed relevant to quote Dr. Karashima’s observations from his latest book⁴⁸:

“Subbarayalu once suggested that the Nāṭṭār or (Nāṭṭavars) of the Cōla times would have been Vellala land holders and this interpretation may apply to the Vijayanagar Nāṭṭavar also to a certain extent. However, we have evidence that in Vijayanagar times they seem to have included other communities also. The Tevūr inscription speaks of the Nāṭṭavars of the nadu which included Brahmadēya tenure together with some other tenures and we have a Pāndyan inscription in Ratnagiri (Tiruchirāppallī district) mentioning Urāli Nāṭṭavar which means the Nāṭṭavars of the Urāli community. It seems therefore that the nāṭṭavar of this period belonged to a diverse community”. What is true of the adult-to adopt Max Weber’s phrase - could also be true of the youth. The modern mind craves for exclusive denotations. These would have only confounded the medieval age which thronged on the definiteness of their concepts.

Before this chapter is concluded it may be pertinent to point out that this study affords the basis for further investigation of some new aspects. They can only be indicated here.

Examples can be easily cited for the nativity of the officials who attest and convey royal orders. A grant made to the temple of Rājēndra Viññagar in the 13th year 139th day of Jat Sundara Cōla Pāṇḍya, the Viceroy of Rājēndra Cōla-I was authenticated by the following^{48A}

The oral orders of the King were conveyed by Tirumandira Ōlai Kaliyan Namasivāyam of Kacciram in Arvalakkurram in Āruṇmolidēva valanādu in Cōlāmandalam.

The Thirumandira Ōlai Nayagam also hailed from the Cōla mandalam, but from the Uttama Cōla nallūr in Nenmali nādu. Another Jayangonḍa Cōla Brahmādirāyan, a Brahmin officer hailed from Āyudasahāya Cm in Tiraimūr nādu (Tiruvidaimarudūr) in Uyyakkondār valanādu.⁴⁹

Among the lower officials the following occur:-

Adikārikal :

These details by themselves are valuable. But unless corroborative testimony of the inscriptions in the specific locations are forthcoming it is difficult to be certain about the identity of the places.

In fact these details are adequate enough to warrant a separate line of investigation. Once the historical geography is discerned and fairly settled, it will be interesting to investigate the official change of the officers who authenticate the grant documents, their nativity, and the area in which the grant land is located.

A second aspect will be to investigate as in the Cōla, CōlaPāṇḍya periods, the extraction of the officials according to the higher or lower designation whether from the Cōla kingdom or the Pāṇḍyan tract. The instance cited above seems to suggest the higher officials translating the King's oral orders were from the Cōla maṇḍalam while the lower communicating officials were drawn from the Pāṇḍyan tract, but from outside the nādu to which the grant order was relatable. This should remain at present only an impressionistic hypothesis yet to be tested by a detailed inductive process after collecting evidence.

49. Political Geography: Subbarayalu p 108.

A third aspect for further investigation is conditioned by the availability of chronologically contiguous evidence. The data thrown up under the first two aspects would lead to the identification of the places of nativity and the persons. Thereafter whether in a given period there is any change or transfer of officials and over a period whether the office is inherited by succession by scions of the same family can also be examined.

Within the scope of the present study these aspects can only be thrown up for separate investigation.

Note : The evidence has been chronologically arranged as far as ascertainable. The identity and chronology of the Pāndyan rulers (early and medieval) is still beset with unsettled problems, and hence where the ruler's identity and date are not definite, the name and the regnal year available are given.

Tenkallaganādu was to the south of Vaigai river in Nilakkottai & Thirumāngalam Taluks and enveloped the north and northeastern part of Nilakkottai Taluk. It was in later times known as Puramalaiparu ie, falling outside the Nāgamalai hills. To its north was Pāganū Kūram. It should not be confused with Kallaganādu situated in Tenkasi - Sankarankōil Taluks of Tirunelvēli Dt.
